* * I must apologize for the Liberty I have taken in altering the Words of some of the following Pieces---Tho' such Alterations and Apologies are now almost Things of course with me, yet as these Songs may be in the Possession of some who have not my preceding Publications; it is proper to repeat, that good Poetry is not always fit for Music: to make it so I have altered it, and not with the least Thought of improving or correcting some of the most finished Pieces in our Language. To those who are acquainted with the Originals, some of these Alterations may appear bold, and others trifling.---The reducing the Measure from Lines of ten Syllables to eight, will be considered as a most flagrant Instance of the one; and the changing a few harmless Particles, of the other: A general Answer would be unsatisfactory, and a particular one too long for this place; I shall therefore defer enlarging upon this Subject, as I may possibly do it in a Treatise, of which the poetical Measures, as applicable to Music, will be a necessary Part.

In Autumn, press the Vineyard's Spoils,

In Winter, waste the Time in Mirth,

Warm by my blazing cheerful Hearth,

At Night, how soothing 'tis to hear
The driving Tempest whistling near,

Pia My Charmer in my Arms I strain,
And slumber to the beating Rain.

(For) How blest beyond the Fool who braves
In search of Wealth the furious Waves!

My weeping Fair I'll never leave
For all the Honours War can give,
Let me for ever far remove
All Cares that lessen happy Love;
In vain would Age those Joys retrieve,
Which Youth alone can taste and give!

Let her smile and I'm instantly gay,

My Heart overflows with Delight!

On her I could gaze all the Day,

And lament the Approach of the Night.

Whate'er's my Employment for her is my Care;

My Thoughts and my Dreams are of nought but my Fair.

(3)

Oh did she but know how I love,

And the Pleasure of loving again,

My Passion her Favour would move;

For herself she would pity my Pain.

Good nature and Int'rest would both make her kind,

For the Joy she might give, and the Rapture she'd find.

Say, will not Fear a Pang inspire,
When Winds the mountain Billows form,
When Lightnings flash their forky Fire,

And awful Thunder, and awful Thunder swells the Storm.

A Dread will surely then prevail,
Thy Soul a kind Compassion move,
While Mem'ry tells the tender Tale
Of all my Vows and hapless Love.

Aghast, on Lifes extremest Verge,
Now struggling in the roaring Main,
Now dead, and sunk beneath the Surge.
Yet let not Visions thus alarm
Thy soft thy feeling Heart with Fear,
For Thee Heav'n shields my Life from Harm
To save such Innocence a Tear.

Few are the Vales that Colin boasts,
And few the Flocks those Vales that rove:
I court not Delia's Heart with Wealth,

The Choice may make my Bosom bleed,
But surely cannot bless her own.

O'er the Hill, thro' the Meadow and Grove;
Can I ever forget the dear Maid
When blushing the first own'd her Love?

When the fear'd ev'n the Trees might reveal

What the scarce could to me tell alone.

But oh! what a Change do I feel,

Now my lovely Companion is gone!

3

She was all my fond Wishes could ask,

She had all the kind Gods could impart,
She was Nature's most beautiful Task,

The Despair and the Envy of Art:
In Her what is worthy to prize
In all that is lovely was dress'd,

For the Graces were thron'd in her Eyes

And the Virtues all lodg'd in her Breast.

The musical score is written for a voice and a cembalo (piano). The voice part is in a soprano or alto range, and the cembalo part is in a lower range. The tempo is marked Adagio, and the mood is marked Pia. The lyrics are written below the voice part. The score is divided into four systems, each with a voice staff and a cembalo staff. The cembalo part features a variety of musical textures, including arpeggiated figures, chords, and melodic lines. The lyrics are: 'To fairest Delia's grassy Tomb, Soft Maids and Village Hinds shall bring Each opening Sweet of earliest Bloom And rifle all the breathing Spring. Each opening Sweet of earliest Bloom, and rifle all the'.
